Hannah is a recent LPC graduate from the University of Law, where she obtained a Distinction level award. Prior to studying at Master's level, Hannah studied LLB Law (Hons) at the University of Liverpool, achieving a 2:1. During her time at university, Hannah enjoyed 3 different modules on criminal law, and thus has an extensive knowledge on a range of matters.

Hannah's professional experience lies predominantly within administration, civil law and recruitment, however she has wanted to dedicate a career in criminal law since competing in legal competitions within the Magistrates Court at the age of 15. This is because Hannah feels particularly passionate about upholding a fair criminal justice system and the right to a fair trial.

Hannah prides herself on her excellent communication skills and rigorous approach towards every case she works on. She treats every client with the upmost respect, no matter what their background is or the seriousness of the offence.
